All four band members of Riley Coyote grew up in Middleboro, MA. The members include Jim Lough as lead singer and on the mandolin, Joe Tummino on guitar, Joe Faria on stand-up bass and Kristen Riley on fiddle.

They began playing bluegrass music for fun around campfires, and a short while later they started writing their own songs and eventually developed into a serious band that has been booking shows and going strong ever since. Riley Coyote plays mostly original old-time style acoustic bluegrass, it's timeless music with a modern edge and lots of foot stomping energy. They have entertained crowds in Boston, Maine, Rhode Island, Cape Cod and all around the South

Shore of Massachusetts. They have also played many local shows at the Soule Homestead, Off the Common Coffeehouse and the Blue Moon Coffeehouse, as well as live music venues in the Boston area like The Plough & Stars, Atwood's Tavern and the Cantab Lounge.
